School as a Place of Student's Development – Waldorf Schools.

One of basic conditions supporting a young man's development is the atmosphere of approval and safety both in the family and the school environment. The article is related to the results of research carried out in Waldorf schools in Poland, which – among others – verified the level of student's approval of the school, which is closely related to the possibility of taking up effective pedagogical actions. The schools observe pupils' skills, individual personality, and sustainable development. Therefore, the actions realized there can serve as inspiration in the search for effective ways to reinforce students' development and skills in other educational institutions.

Key words: education, development, approval, student, pupil, teacher, Waldorf schools
