

Prof. Stanisław Dawidziuk PhD

Warsaw Management Academy In Warsaw

The able student today – the creative manager tomorrow.

Taking into consideration the contemporary, very demanding job market, educating the able student is becoming especially significant. Creating the best conditions for the growth of able children is one of the priorities among the tasks of contemporary education. They may become our main driving force in the future of both dynamic development of economy and forecasting as well as – owing to innovative solutions – avoiding economic crises. Educational system in Poland does not create special conditions for able children. It does not include them to the group of children of special need, either. Perhaps, it is worth remembering that a creative, innovative and able manager (IT specialist, engineer etc.) of tomorrow is the present day able student in X school.

A note on the author

Prof. Stanisław Dawidziuk PhD, Warsaw Management Academy in Warsaw

Scientific interests: education, especially higher education, including the process of educating, didactics of higher school, organisation of education, financing the system of education, educating process, lifelong learning, teacher, their role in the process of education, managing of education, marketing in education and higher education, enterprise.

rektorat@mac.edu.pl